Manuel Cantalapiedra, along with his viticulturist father Isaac, work 21 hectares of vineyards spread over several plots in the municipality of La Seca - the heart of the Rueda appellation and home to the Verdejo grape. While most producers in the region have embraced the ultra-modern styles of Verdejo (industrial farming, cultured yeasts, acidification, and cold fermentation) to make an internationally appealing wine, the Cantalapiedra vineyards are certified organic and their winemaking is resolutely natural. They work with fully ripe fruit, ferment with wild yeasts with little temperature control, and add very little sulfur. Manuel is experimenting with whole cluster fermented red wines, orange wines with skin contact, zero sulfur-added pet-nats, and wines under flor. Although the Cantalapiedra's work is outside of the Rueda D.O., one could say that they are the "torchbearers for Real Rueda."

La Seca is located just southwest of the city of Valladolid in Castilla y León. The area sits on the western flank of the meseta at high elevation and is comprised of gentle rolling hills along with flatter areas. It possesses a severely continental climate with warm days and cold nights. The soils are sandy loam to clay loam over clay-calcareous bedrock with large river stones. The complex soils and climate are ideal for growing the Verdejo grape.

Lirondo is a Verdejo parcel wine from their "Las Escucillas" vineyard. Grapes are hand-harvested, destemmed, and macerated 12 hours before gentle pressing. The wine is fermented and aged in stainless steel tank, spending 8 months on fine lees before bottling in June 2018 without any fining, filtration or added SO<sub>2</sub>. The true qualities of Verdejo are on display with this wine, it is aromatic, bright, and fresh.
